Sheerest Crepes for the Newest Blouses Have Touches of Embroidery—Catch-all bag Can Be Pretty—How to Wash Without Rubbing—Making Candles Last a Long Time—An Accident Cabinet—New Soaps in Form of Berries and Fruits.

CREPE IS POPULAR.
Sheerest crepe is taking splendidly in the cotton waist models and, to a considerable extent, is displacing the white lace waists, says the Dry Goods Economist. In fact, this crepe is so sheer and delicate in texture that it is quite as effective as the lace and, at the same time, gives much more service.

These white waists of cotton crepe have touches of hand embroidery, novelty collars or organdy, lace and wash silk, and a variety of novelty buttons, silk cords and fancy ties.

A CATCH-ALL BAG.
Pretty to have about the living room or on the veranda of the summer cottage is a catch-all bag. It is a wedge-shaped affair having a base made of a quarter yard by four-inch broad strip of heavy cardboard covered with the same sort of cretonne which furnishes the sides and which are shirred on to it along the edge.

Half way down from the mouth extends a plain strip of cretonne which is stitched on under a neat self-colored gimp and finishing the top edges is a stiff whalebone, also gimp-covered and supporting gimp loops by which the contrivance may be suspended from a hook. The bag is neatly lined throughout with the plain cretonne and is designed to temporarily hold letters and various small articles.

WASHING WITHOUT RUBBING.
Sort your clothes, soak the cleanest in lukewarm suds for about ten minutes.

While waiting fill the boiler two-thirds full of water.
Slice a half-bar of good white soap (white suds will make white clothes) and add a lump of paraffin about the size of a walnut.

Put both together in a quart of water and cook until dissolved.

When the water in the boiler is to the boiling point, put in soap and paraffin and then the clothes.
Boil about twenty minutes, rinse in two waters and one blue.

You need not rub clothes—as dirt is all boiled out.

The flat pieces can be put through the wringer by folding through the center and hung up that way they do not need ironing, as they are very smooth and very white.

AN ACCIDENT CABINET.
A useful home-made piece of furniture that is worth many times the cost is an accident cabinet.

I had an old washstand, with one drawer at the top and a table shelf close to the bottom, says a writer in an exchange. I painted it with white enamel, then took four yards of white cretonne, with a small spray of rose buds on it, and made four curtains with two-inch hems at the top and bottom. I made a back for my washstand out of store box boards, then ran thick twine through the curtains at the top and fastened it with staples at each corner of the stand, so that one curtain is at each side and two for the front, then fastened it the same way at the bottom. I made a shelf the length of the back and four inches wide, screwing it on securely and making small braces for it.

On this I put a bottle of each of the following: Arnica, witch hazel, peppermint, liniment, turpentine, jar of peroxide and of antiphlogistine.

In the drawer I put a roll of medicated cotton, one jar of medicated gauze, six sanitary wash cloths, six ladies' and six gentlemen's handkerchiefs, six linen towels, six bath towels, three rolls of old cloth torn at different widths for bandages—old bed sheets are best.

On the bottom shelf I have a complete change of underwear and a night dress for each member of my family.

NEW SOAPS.

According to the Dry Goods Economist, a new and extremely novel way of presenting soap is in the form of fruits, berries, etc. Remarkably natural reproductions have been evolved along this line, it being practically impossible, at a short distance, to distinguish them from the natural product.

Extremely attractive, as well as practical steamer baskets are made up of these fancy soaps in various sizes. They are mounted on backgrounds of leaves or green crepe paper. Each fruit or berry is provided with its stem and the coloring in each case is perfectly natural.

AMERICAN PARTY TO ASK RECOGNITION

Salt Lake, June 27.—At a meeting of former American party men who are now members of the Republican party last night it was decided unanimously to demand from the Republican county convention this fall an adequate representation on the Republican county ticket.

The meeting was held in the court room of Justice Harry S. Harper in the Judge building and was attended by about twenty former American party members, among them several who had served as members of the American county committee. Former Americans were disappointed two years ago in failing to receive greater recognition on the county ticket and this year decided to press their claims more vigorously.

The disposition of those who attended the meeting last night was to pledge themselves to support only those candidates for nomination on the county ticket who were formerly members of the American party. They were not antagonistic to other candidates, but were of the belief that an agreement might be entered into prior to the convention whereby the other members of the Republican party might concede to the former Americans certain places on the county ticket.

While no candidates were mentioned at last night's meeting of the former Americans, it is understood that among the former Americans who may come out as candidates for county office on the Republican ticket are:

John Hopfenbeck for county clerk, former Chief of Police S. M. Barlow for sheriff, A. J. Charon for county commissioner, Harry S. Harper for justice of the peace and George P. Tingas for constable.

IN RED AND WHITE.

A novelty material is sponge weave was made up in this design, the stripes being used effectively so that no trimming is required.

The collar, cuffs and girdle are of satin, matching the stripes, which are of a carmine shade. The back, sleeves and yoke are in one piece and the closing is made with snaps under the edge of the front. The ornamental buttons are of white and red enamel. The sash is tied in a bow at the back.

WASTEFUL USE OF IRRIGATION WATER

The Utah Agricultural college and the Utah Agricultural Commission are working together in a campaign among the farmers to eliminate the wasteful use of irrigation water. An important step in the movement is the posters now being mailed out from the President's office of the State College. The posters are of two classes. One a warning, the other suggestions for the proper use of the water. They are two by three feet in size and are to be posted up in every court house and postoffice of the state in addition to many other public buildings.

A timely bulletin which is bound to assist in the movement, has just come from press. It is entitled "The Effect of Varying Quantities of Irrigation Water and Manure on the Growth and Yield of Corn," and represents the results of three years of experimentation on the subject by Dr. F. S. Harris, who is the author.

In the introduction of the publication, it is pointed out that the subject of primary importance to the farmers at the present time is the question of water. "It is not a question of how to make an acre of land yield more. There is much more land available than will be used for a long time. It is a question of how to make each acre-foot of water answer the needs of more land. The supply of water is limited."

The bulletin points out many ways in which this can be better done than at present. Any interested person may get the work by writing the Experiment Station at the Utah Agricultural college. It will be mailed free.

JOS. HILLSTROM IS CLOSELY GUARDED

Salt Lake, June 27.—Failing to reach a verdict by 11 o'clock last night, the jury in the case of Joseph Hillstrom, charged with the murder of J. G. Morrison, were locked up for the night by order of Judge M. L. Ritchie.

The case was given to the jury at 4:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon, following two and a half days of argument by contending counsel.

Four hours later there was no evidence of a verdict. The jurists in charge of the jury telephoned Judge Ritchie for instructions and were ordered to lock up the jury for the night. Until that hour a score or more of Hillstrom's friends, including a number of I. W. W. members, remained in the corridors awaiting a verdict.

Sheriff Andrew Smith, Jr., and several of his deputies were on hand until the jury retired for the night. The sheriff said this was as a precaution against any possible demonstration that might be attempted by Hillstrom's friends in case of conviction.

Denounces Legal Procedure.
In the defense's concluding argument to the jury, Attorney E. D. McDougall denounced the prevailing system of criminal procedure as a travesty on the ideals of justice. He declared that men are convicted by the police and the prosecuting attorneys, not by the jury that sit in judgment.

The law gives the defendant the presumption of innocence until he is proven guilty. But the presumption of innocence, which is the very foundation of justice, is but a theory with our prosecuting attorneys. It is so, with Mr. Leatherwood and with nearly all prosecutors. The police and the prosecutors invariably presume a defendant to be guilty and they proceed upon that basis. It is an abominable system.

The police are the tools of the prosecuting attorney. McDougall declared that the prosecution, instead of getting a picture of the criminal and then trying to find the criminal, had gotten Hillstrom and then tried to make up a picture that would fit him. He deplored the system by which it is left to the police, he declared, to arrest a lot of men under suspicion, keep them in the others' loose and proceed to construct a case to convict the man whom they decided should be tried. He continued:

"The system is wrong that will let the police do such things. It is an outrage that such conditions should prevail. Our criminal courts are all wrong. I do not mean to criticize this court, but I mean the system is wrong. Why should the police be allowed to decide who shall be prosecuted and why should they be permitted to prosecute without leaving it to the court and jury to decide who is guilty?"

ARRAIGNS LEATHERWOOD.
McDougall denounced the district attorney for having attempted to prejudice the jury by asking why the defendant had not taken the stand to tell how he was shot that night of murder. He declared that the defendant does not have to prove his innocence, but that the state must prove his guilt.

"The defendant may sit back in his dignity and demand that the state produce proof of his guilt. He is not bound to open his mouth or speak one word and the fact that he does not is no concern of yours and you can not consider it as evidence against him. It is true that if you or I were wounded and were accused as this man is we would take the stand and tell how it happened, but Hillstrom won't. He won't tell me how it happened and he hates me because I have endeavored to have him tell me. That is why he rose in this courtroom the other day and discharged me as his counsel and ordered me out of the courtroom, all because I had probed and probed him to have him tell me how he was wounded. What his reason is I do not know, but it is none of my business and none of yours."

"This I do know, he was not shot in Morrison's store. Where he was shot does not matter so long as it has been proven, as it has been, that he was not shot in Morrison's store."

It was noon when the defense finished. The district attorney, E. O. Leatherwood, began his final argument at 2 o'clock and concluded at 4 o'clock.

"Anarchy" was the term he used in answering the charge of Attorney McDougall that the American system of criminal jurisprudence is a travesty on justice. He said:

"My blood boils with keen resentment, gentlemen, when I hear such unwarranted attacks on American institutions—institutions which are the foundation stones of our glorious concepts of liberty, equality and justice. I tell you that when any considerable number of our fellow being subscribe to the doctrine you heard enunciated here this morning, then liberty flees the confines of our fair land and anarchy begins its reign."

Mr. Leatherwood made a reply to all the charges of the defense that the state had been unfair, that the police had persecuted the defendant, and that the system under which he was tried precluded the chance of justice. Having disposed of these charges he proceeded to a summation of the evidence, which, he declared, left no shadow of a doubt that Joseph Hillstrom was the man who shot and killed the Morrises.

In his final remarks he asked a verdict of guilty and an enforcement of the death penalty, not, he said, as a matter of revenge upon Joseph Hillstrom, as made so much of by the defense, but as a defense to the lives of all law-abiding citizens and as a deterrent warning to all evildoers.

"I bear no malice toward Joseph Hillstrom," he declared. "Would that I could undo the thing that he has done and could set him free in right-some paths. Would that I could, by some magic wand, clear him of the foul crime that is his; would that I could by that same wand restore the lives of J. G. Morrison and his little son Arlin. But I cannot, and you Jurors cannot. But this you can do and must do: enforce the majesty of the law as framed by the people of this great state; enforce it so that anarchy and murder and crime shall be pushed back another step beyond the pale of civilization; enforce it so that you and your wives and your daughters and your sons and all upright men shall walk the earth free from the danger of those parasites on society who murder and rob rather than make an honest living."

FACE BROKE OUT WITH PIMPLES

Would Enlarge to About Four Times Their Size, Itched Very Much and Cracked Open. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In Short Time Cured.

R. F. D. No. 1, Thurston, Ohio.—"About a year ago my face broke out with small pimples. They were about as big as the head of a pin when first noticed, but soon enlarged to about four times that size. A yellow fluid would gather in them and I could open them. This enlarged the sores and caused large scars over my face. When it would come to dry up it would crack open and around the crack making a very sore spot."

"I tried several different salves and ointments but none of them did any permanent good. At last I sent for some Cuticura Soap and Ointment which I used according to directions and in a short time I was completely cured and it did not even leave a scar." (Signed) Miss E. Irene Thomas, June 16, 1913.
